

Germaine Miera first joined the Division of Criminal Justice in 1989 when she worked for both the Office of Research and Statistics and the Office of Community Corrections. Through 1992, Germaine participated in a variety of activities including the design and implementation of statewide data collection projects, training of probation and parole officers in Client Management Classification, an interviewing and case planning system for adult corrections clients. Germaine also conducted performance audits and program evaluations of community corrections facilities across Colorado. Germaine returned to the Division of Criminal Justice in 2007 and serves as the primary coordinator for the activities of the Colorado Commission on Criminal and Juvenile Justice and its task forces and working groups. This responsibility includes tracking the Commission's accomplishments and overseeing the publication of its comprehensive annual reports. Germaine also works as a coordinator for the Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring (ADAM) Program in the Denver Jail, a project she has been involved with since 1990. She has a degree in sociology with an emphasis in criminal justice from the University of Colorado.
